The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for republication of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited in this paper, and also the local news published therein.

About the only thing in Mexico that is certain is Villa. He's a real thing and always to be reckoned with, regrettable as that is.

Various recipients of the Congressional Record should prepare themselves to withstand the shock of being cut off the mailing list of the Congressional Record. Paper is too scarce to be wasted.

Vermont has 665 persons under its charge as probationers from court. The number is large but ought to be subject to reduction just as soon as the time limit imposed under a wet regime has run out. Many of the probation cases undoubtedly arise from the excessive use of liquor, the use of the liquor causing the outbreak of minor offenses.

For a town of only 27 voters, St. George, in Chittenden county, is making quite a stir in court circles, having occupied no less than a week in a lower court in the presentation of a dispute between contestants for town offices and the case is now going to the supreme court of Vermont for settlement. The legal machine involved seems to be all out of proportion to the importance of the issues in the matter.

Frequently examples of the efficacy of steel railroad coaches in saving the lives of passengers in wrecks, such as that on the Boston & Albany R. R. at North Grafton, Mass., ought to be powerful influences in causing the railroad systems to equip their lines with such vehicles just as soon as financial conditions will permit. It will be a fine stroke of business for a railroad to be able to announce that it has equipped itself completely with steel coaches.

After paying a fine and being ordered to dispose of a vicious dog, a Newfane man "disposed of" the animal by sending it to another town, Chesterfield, N. H. This reminds one of the current method of getting rid of the social evil by dumping the prostitutes on another town. Moral clean-ups, so-called, are effected by forcing some other community to harbor the undesirable, and the cleaned-up town proceeds forthwith to plume itself on its moral cleanliness. Simply shifting the responsibility on some other shoulders is not a moral clean-up by any means. No more is a vicious dog "disposed of" by thrusting it on some other community.

Judge Harland B. Howe, Vermont dispenser of justice on the bench of the U. S. district courts, is not a trifle when it comes to the matter of handling convicted profiteers. His sentencing of a Utica, N. Y., firm, which was convicted on eleven counts of profiteering, to pay a fine of $55,000, accords with the public estimate of what ought to be done to suppress the practice of gouging the public while the latter is practically defenseless. A few more sentences of that sort by Judge Howe and similar action by other judges with backbone will have a tendency to stop the morally and legally wrong practice of showing up prices until an exorbitant rate of profit is secured.

The following tribute to the lack of profiteering by Vermont farmers on their 1910 maple sugar crops is from the Boston Transcript:

It is not surprising to learn that Vermont's maple sugar production was larger this year than usual, but, remembering some things about the other kind of sugar, it is truly remarkable to find that the price of the Vermont article is only a little higher than heretofore.

As a rule, Vermont farmers are not disposed to take more than a fair percentage of profit from their investment, as Boston people will find if they should have occasion to come into the Green Mountain state and get in business contact with the farmers here.

There is a measure of self-interest, perhaps, in the offer by the United States government authorities to assist Mexico in combating the bubonic plague, which has broken out in Vera Cruz and other parts of eastern Mexico, for if the plague is permitted to spread it will almost inevitably find its way into the United States with the resulting dire effects. At the same time the offer of the American authorities to send sanitary detachments and supplies to Vera Cruz may be taken to be an act of neighborly interest inasmuch as the spirit of the United States government is not selfish even though the seed of aid may have developed in a country which had done many things to harm the United States. The United States would have sent aid to the other end of the world had it been demonstrated that the need called imperatively to the government at Washington. It is to be hoped that the co-operation of the American government will enable Mexico to stamp out the threatened disaster. Bubonic plague is an extreme menace.

The first published announcement by Congressman Porter H. Dale that he was a candidate to succeed himself as a Vermont representative in the House was made in a St. Johnsbury paper, the congressman stating: "I am a candidate, but I hardly think I shall make any formal announcement about it at this time. The voters of this district know who I am and ought to know by this time what I believe and stand for." That is a pertinent point. The fact is that a large number of voters in the second Vermont district, from the north to the south end of the state, do not know who their representative in Congress is either by acquaintance or by name, so they cannot know what that representative stands for. Congressman Dale is a likeable person and of many good qualities, but he has not made a strong impression either on the second district or upon the doings in Congress, although he has served three terms at Washington.

CURRENT COMMENT

Governor's Myth Exploded.

Governor P. W. Clement has persistently claimed that he did not want to call a special session of the legislature to the federal constitutional amendment granting suffrage to women because he believed no amendments changing the constitution should be ratified until favorably acted upon by a referendum. It was a pretty myth with which he camouflaged his real position, but the supreme court of the United States has ruthlessly destroyed the myth in its unanimous decision that state legislatures or constitutional conventions are the only bodies authorized to act upon proposed changes to the federal constitution.

The constitution itself provides methods for its amendments and the court makes the obvious decision that those provisions are the only valid ones for effecting changes. The governor of Vermont can no longer consistently refuse to call the legislature of Vermont in session that it may act upon this matter. Ratification by the Vermont legislature would give the necessary 38 ratifications and put the amendment in force in time to give millions of women an opportunity to vote for president.

The national Republican committee has issued an appeal to any Republican states that have failed to ratify to act at once, the state Republican committee of Vermont and later the state Republican convention have appealed directly to Governor Clement to call a special session to allow Vermont to do justice to the women of the nation. These are sufficient political reasons for favorable action by the governor, and the decision of the supreme court removes the last excuse for failure to act. The governor would be performing the best political service and the greatest act of justice of his term if he would issue a call for a special session and allow the public to have its say in this matter.—Brattleboro Reformer.

How can you expect to sleep tonight unless you do something to relieve the trouble? Eczema and other itching skin troubles don't often heal themselves. But it is surprising how quickly Resinol does heal them.

Almost daily we hear from a skin-sufferer who says, "Resinol Ointment stopped my itching at once and I got the first good night's sleep I had had in weeks. Now my skin is well." At all druggists.
